1. In mid-January 1952 the Chinese Communist Ministry of Public Security had ordered the Public Security Department of Tientsin to recruit from its ranks fifty English-speaking persons for service in Tibet. The qualifications to be met by these persons were as follows:
 - a. Membership in either the Chinese Communist Party or the Democratic Youth Corps. Both men and women are acceptable.
 - b. More than three years of experience in Public Security service.
 - c. Familiarity with English official correspondence (sic).
 - d. A thorough command of spoken and written English.
2. The order stated that qualified recruits would be sent to the borders of Tibet, but did not specify the assignments to be given them. Prospective candidates were to report to the Ministry of Public Security before the end of February 1952.

 Comment. The above information supplements that in which reported the sending of Chinese Communist Party Social Affairs Department cadres to Tibet, and the appointment of the director of the Public Security Department of the Tibet Military and Administrative Committee.
